Levins Hus

Levins House is a listed building rebuilt after a fire in 1728, located near the old city gate "Vesterport" right in the center of Faaborg. It is used for cultural purposes such as art exhibitions, meetings and art activities for all age groups. The ground floor can be used for smaller art exhibitions and art lessons. Free entrance to exhibitions in the building.
Vestergade 3, 5600 Faaborg

Vesterport

Is built in the 1400 years and formed the border between the market town and the surrounding area. Only from the mid-1800s did the city begin to grow beyond the borders that had been stuck since the Middle Ages. Vesterport is one of two remaining medieval city gates in Denmark (the Mill Gate in Stege is the other). Vesterport has changed appearance several times, one of the most drastic was when the gate was covered with cement plaster. The current appearance is from a renovation in 1917
